Anjar: Flowers, Goats and Heroes – Stories from the Armenian Genocide

Director: Noura Kevorkian, 2008, 87 minutes

Growing up in Lebanon during the Lebanese Civil War, the filmmaker's life in a small Armenian village becomes forever linked to a group of 1915 genocide survivors. Through rare photos and archival footage the feature documentary lyrically travels between two war-torn eras, leaving the viewer with the impression that history is never that far away.
