The Genocide in Me

(Dir. Araz Artinian, 2006, 53 mins)

One of the most insightful and poignant examinations of the cross-generational impact of the Armenian genocide and its denial.

Raised by nationalistic Armenian parents, Araz Artinian has grown up with the Armenian Genocide as a backdrop to her identity and the identity of her family. Through conversations with her family, genocide survivors, and citizens of modern-day Turkey, she discovers the importance of remembrance and her own personal connection to the cultural heritage passed down from her parents.
